Would you like to understand nature better and be proactive in its conservation? Become devoted guardians of nature?

Join this 3 day course that introduces ornithology, covering bird identification, flight, migration, breeding and feeding habits, and ecological importance. Explore bird habitats, avian biometry and data documentation through specialised discussions and a field visit. Gain insights into the cultural and conservation challenges related to birds.

The course will be conducted in person at INTACH,
71, Lodi Estate, New Delhi -110003

Birds are the most frequent form of wildlife which city dwellers see.

But do we really understand them? If we did, we would still see sparrows in our houses.

COURSE HIGHLIGHTS

This course is designed to enable the ordinary citizen to know and understand the birds around us in order to nurture and protect them. Delivered by experts from Ela Foundation, it consists of classroom sessions and a field visit. The course would equip you to understand and conserve bird life around us and put you on the way to become a nature steward.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

Upon completion of this course the participants will be able to:

- Identify and classify birds based on physical traits, calls and behaviour, using basic identification methods
- Explain bird adaptations and ecological roles
- Apply field study methods and data documentation
- Demonstrate awareness of bird conservation challenges and solutions
